SHIPS CRESTS

HMS ESKIMO (2700 tons) is a "Tribal" class frigate launched in 1960 and carries a Wasp helicopter for anti-submarine reconnaissance. Her badge depicts a reindeer's head, reflecting her name. She visited Tristan in September 1970.

HMS NAJAD (2860 tons) is a "Leander" class frigate launched in 1963. She carries "Seacat" anti-aircraft guided missile equipment and a helicopter. Her badge features a golden sea-nymph - a "naiad". She visited Tristan in November 1968.

HMS JAGUAR (2520 tons) is a "Leopard" class anti-aircraft frigate launched in 1955 and designed primarily for convoy protection. She visited Tristan in March 1964 and her badge illustrates her name.

HMS LONDON (6200 tons) is a "County" class destroyer launched in 1961. She is equipped with "Sea-slug" and "Seacat" missile launchers and a Wessex anti-submarine helicopter. She visited Tristan in December 1964. Her badge features a red dagger.

Royal Navy ships have had their own individual crests for many years, but only since 1918 have they been officially recognised and designed in proper heraldic form. The badge shown below belongs to HMS JUNO, a "Leander" class frigate which has also visited Tristan, and it features the head of Juno, the wife of Jupiter.
